Publish It! is a school-community family literacy partnership.

The Publish It! Project is designed to involve participants in the writing, publishing and home, school and community use of high-interest, locally produced books.

Participants come to the publishing centre in the school's computer lab to work on their books either after school or in the evening. They collaborate on the writing of the books and learn how to illustrate their books using photographs. The books are then published in the on-site publishing centre.

Participants learn how to insert their photos and text into word-processing programs in order to publish their books.

The books become part of the classroom, school and community libraries and are used for instruction and enjoyment.
